Thank you for your on-going commitment to examining the lessons learned from the COVID-19 pandemic and for your continued advocacy to expand telehealth access beyond the end of the public health emergency (PHE). Much attention has been given to the important role telehealth and remote care services have played in extending access to high quality care during the pandemic. The undersigned organizations write to support and endorse your legislation, the Telehealth Benefit Expansion for Workers Act of 2023 (H.R. 824), which would amend the Public Health Service Act, the Employee Retirement Income and Security Act of 1974, and the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to treat telehealth services as excepted benefits.

As you know, on June 23, 2020, the Labor, HHS and Treasury Departments jointly issued an FAQ pertaining to the Families First Coronavirus Response Act, the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security Act (CARES) and other health coverage issues.¹ Specifically, it stated that the agencies would take a non-enforcement position for employers wishing to provide telehealth or other remote care services to employees ineligible for any other employer-sponsored group health plan for the duration of the PHE.

Therefore, until this legislation is enacted, the treatment of telehealth services as an excepted benefit is temporary and will expire once the COVID-19 PHE ends. Uncertainty has driven employer hesitancy to offer telehealth benefits that will have to be taken away a short time later. Passage of this legislation is needed to provide certainty and ensure expanded, long-term access to these services. The Administration recently announced its intention to end the PHE on May 11, 2023, creating a new sense of urgency to address this issue and ensure workers that gained access to new benefits during the pandemic are able maintain access to affordable, high-quality care.

The COVID-19 pandemic has illustrated the immense benefits of telehealth and remote care services. Telehealth benefits reduce the need to leave home or work and risk infection at a physician's office, provide a solution for individuals with limited mobility or access to transportation, and has the potential to address provider shortages. Workers want these benefits, and employers want to continue offering these comprehensive telehealth benefits. We commend you for introducing this critical legislation that will ensure hardworking employees, retirees, and their families can access high-quality, cost-effective care when and where they need it most, regardless of employment status. It is our hope that the bipartisan nature of the bill, the need to address this issue with the imminent end of the PHE, widespread support among stakeholders, and the common-sense approach to increasing access to virtual care for employees will propel this legislation forward and ensure quick passage.

Again, thank you for your continued leadership on this critical issue. We look forward to continuing to work with you to ensure employees can continue to receive care where and when they need it with the swift consideration of this bill.

Sincerely,
